R.U.R. (Rossum's Universal Robots) by Karel Capek is an interesting read. It is a Sci-fi play. This story was completely new to me. I didn't know who came up with robots but now I know. This is the first Sci-fi story with the word Robot. The world of Sci-fi can thank this man for bringing Robots into the world. So, Karel, thank you!

R.U.R. by Karel Čapek

In their introduction to the play, translators Peter Majer and Cathy Porter write that Čapek's 'idiosyncratic nihilism found its earliest expression in his first large-scale stage drama, R.U.R., or Reason's Universal Robots 1921. The Robot was the invention of Karel Čapek and his brother Josef, and the play is a gloriously dystopic science-fiction fantasy about them and the brave new world of the men who mass-produce them . . .

R.U.R. - Drama Online

Čapek's early attempts at fiction were short stories and plays for the most part written with his brother Josef. Čapek's first international success was R.U.R., a dystopian work about a bad day at a factory populated with sentient androids. The play was translated into English in 1922, and was being performed in the UK and America by 1923.

Karel Čapek - Wikipedia

R.U.R. is a 1920 science fiction play by the Czech writer Karel Čapek. R.U.R. stands for Rossumovi Univerzální Roboti (Rossum's Universal Robots). The English phrase "Rossum's Universal Robots" has been used as a subtitle. It premiered on 25 January 1921 and introduced the word "robot" to the English language and to science fiction as a whole.

Alquist, that is—he's a chief of construction at R.U.R. He wanted to die, but instead the robots set him up to try to find the formula for making new robots. Without the formula, the robots can't build more robots, which means when the old robots wear out (in 20 years or so), that's it for life (or their version of life) on earth.
