The authorship
of the Johannine
works—the Gospel of John,
Epistles of John, and the Book of Revelation—has been debated by scholars since
at least the 2nd century AD.

The main debate
centers on who authored the
writings, and which of the
writings, if any, can be ascribed to a
common author.
There may have been a single author for the

Conventions of
Scientific Authorship |
Science | AAAS

With the rising
incidence of
authorship disputes
and misconduct, and rising interest from the scientific community to improve authorship transparency, many metrics have been developed to quantify—rather than simply qualify—the contribution of each co-author [17,18]; however, none have been widely recognised or adopted by scientific journals.

Because authorship is a matter of public credit and responsibility, those and only those who have met accepted criteria for authorship should be included as authors.
