~~Star Trek 50th Anniversary Klingon Bird of Prey Kit Review (Rare)Star Trek Klingon Bird Of~~

As originally conceived, the Klingon variant of the Bird-of-Prey was actually a Romulan ship; the script of Star Trek III at first called for the film's main villains to be Romulans using a Romulan Bird-of-Prey, as had been typical of Bird-of-Prey use in Star Trek: The Original Series. In other early drafts of the movie's script, the Bird-of-Prey was suggested as having been stolen, by the ship's Klingon commander, from the Romulans.

~~Klingon Bird of Prey—Memory Alpha, the Star Trek Wiki~~

The Kor-class Bird-of-Prey is based on the famed B'rel Bird-of-Prey Retrofit's original design, however it has been heavily modified to be better suited for battle against the Klingon Empire's current foes. QulDun class: The QulDun class is slightly different from the B'rel-class Bird-of-Prey. While using a classic Klingon design for the starship, the QulDun features no feathered wing pattern on the wings.

~~Klingon Bird of Prey—Official Star Trek Online Wiki~~

Klingon Bird-of-Prey The ubiquitous spread-wing craft capable of atmospheric, planetary or warp operations is utilized in two classes: the smaller B'rel and the larger K'Vort. Kruge's smaller ship had a crew of 12 in 2286. One bird-of-prey on surprise military raids in 2372 against Cardassia carried a crew of 36.

~~Klingon Bird of Prey | Star Trek~~

The process of designing a 22nd-century style of Klingon Bird-of-Prey began when the producers of Star Trek: Enterprise asked John Eaves to design such a ship. Since Eaves had devised a modified Klingon Bird-of-Prey for Star Trek: Deep Space Nine but it hadn't been used, he thought he had already done half the job of planning a new Klingon Bird-of-Prey. He thus pulled out his earlier concept drawing and submitted the design again.
