There is one story that really stands out to me when it comes to the danger of badly designed/complicated apps. For a while my brother was super into making pixel art. He got a nice program on his computer and began doing pixel art animations. One time he made an animation that was so cool, I asked him to show me how he did it.

Before getting my hands on the iPad Pro and Apple Pencil, I didn't even know that I wanted to be a professional artist! Real paints were too messy and frustrating, and a Wacom Cintiq was too bulky and expensive for a career in art to be worth it to me. The iPad Pro has eliminated all excuses. It is the best of both worlds.
