

The Juvenile Justice System Law And Process

A separate juvenile justice system was established in the United States about 100 years ago with the goal of diverting youthful offenders from the destructive punishments of criminal courts and encouraging rehabilitation based on the individual juvenile's needs. This system was to differ from adult or criminal court in a number of ways. The literature on juvenile justice is largely concerned with offenders, but young people come to the attention of the justice system also as victims. For example, many of the runaways and other status offenders apprehended by the police are victims of abuse or neglect, which may be why they ran away (Chesney-Lind and Pasko 2004).
